Message from the Mayor

Dear Neighbors:

I’ve often told the story of coming home from school to find my father being led away by the police. My dad - a star to many, a husband and provider to our family, and a superhero to me - was facing financial difficulties and, with a family to support, had difficult decisions to make. His ultimate choice was not a good one, but it is the choice that too many people find themselves making in an effort to make ends meet. Good people, facing formidable circumstances, often make bad choices. But what if we had the power to expand their choices? What if we could minimize seemingly insurmountable hardships? What if we could reward good people with good opportunities? Those are some of the questions I have asked myself since that life-altering day from my childhood, and those are the answers I set out to find immediately upon being sworn in as Mayor.

Just as I used to reimagine what my life might have been like had my father never been sent to prison, I, alongside officials from our Administration and committed leaders from various communities, set out to reimagine criminal justice in Atlanta. Interestingly, the results of those musings were similar, both visioning a city where parents were not separated from their children, families could earn respectable livings and afford their homes, and a safety net of resources awaited any neighbor who needed direction or a helping hand. This vision is not mine alone. It is the same vision that Atlanta's Drum Major for Justice, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. envisioned when he spoke of the Beloved Community nearly 65 years ago.

I am proud of the strides towards equity our Administration has taken over the past three years - ending cash bail, closing our detention centers to ICE, paying our public safety officers livable wages so that they can afford to live in and have authentic relationships with the communities in which they work, providing workforce development opportunities to residents who have paid their debt to society, and decriminalizing marijuana in Atlanta, but the demands of our day require that we do more. In June, the Reimagining ACDC Task Force sent recommendations to my office on how we could convert our underutilized City jail into a center of equity, healing and hope. Over the next few months, I will accept and finalize plans to move us from simply imagining an Atlanta that truly affords opportunities to all who seek better lives to operationalizing that vision.

Atlanta can be a Beloved Community, and we can achieve our vision for One Atlanta. Realizing that dream has been my priority since Day One, and will continue to be my North Star until we can finally close the book on our local tale of two cities.

I am grateful for the dedication of my team, the Reimagining ACDC Task Force, and all of our involved community partners. We have come a long way in a short period of time. The time to continue our progress is now.

Mayor Keisha Lance Bottoms
60th Mayor of Atlanta
Reflections from the Task Force Co-Chairs

“It is in everyone’s interest to allow EVERYONE to have economic opportunity. When a person has a job - and hope for a career with increasing pay - that person has the money to pay their rent, their child support. It is not because of some character flaw that people commit crimes - it is because we have boxed them in and they have no other choice. We need to provide a better way.”

~ Bill McGahan
Founder & Chairman, Georgia Works!

“I was honored to serve with Marilynn and Bill to lead the work to reimagine our detention center. I am thankful for the Mayor’s leadership and vision to close our city jail and transform it into a center for health and wellness. I am proud of both the process and the product of our work and look forward to the next steps and new direction.”

~ Rashad Taylor
Senior Advisor to the Mayor, City of Atlanta

“On May 20, 2019 when you signed the legislation, I was overcome with emotions. My face became drowned in tears. I thank you, Mayor Bottoms, for your willingness to be a change agent for the City of Atlanta and the United States, and also one who listened. The nation is watching. I am excited that the Center for Equity will forever change Atlanta and how we relate to our marginalized folks.”

The Big Picture: Local Jails in Communities Nationwide

According to the United States Department of Justice’s annual survey of jails and census of jail inmates, the incarceration rate in county and city jails has risen greatly since 1980.¹

However, from 2008 to 2016, the incarceration rate in county and city jails across the United States dropped. Due to the declining incarceration rate in county and city jails, such as the Atlanta City Detention Center, the need for these facilities is also declining.

Making the Case: Inequities in Mass Incarceration

This graphic, created by the VERA Institute of Justice, displays the misuse of jails across the United States. According to the VERA Institute, nearly 75 percent of people nationally are being held (in jail) for nonviolent traffic, property, drug, or public order offenses.

INCARCERATION’S FRONT DOOR: THE MISUSE OF JAILS IN AMERICA

Jails have a much broader reach than prisons. Although state and federal prisons incarcerate, on any given day, about twice the number of people than jails, each year jails have close to 20 times more admissions than prisons.

Local jails: 11,700,000

State & federal prisons: 631,000

Nearly 75 percent of people in jail are being held for nonviolent traffic, property, drug, or public order offenses.

Serious mental illness affects men and women in jail at rates four to six times higher than in the general population.

African Americans are jailed at almost four times the rate of white Americans.

While the country has grown safer since the early 1990s, an ever-larger proportion of the population is being sent to jail.

Source: VERA Institute of Justice
The data in the following graphs was collected and provided by the City of Atlanta’s Department of Corrections, and ranges from August 2015 to May 2020. The decline in average daily population, decline in number of inmates booked year-to-date (YTD), and the consistent percentage of inmates that are recidivists demonstrates the decreasing need for the Atlanta City Detention Center as an arrest and processing center, matched with an increased need for alternative programs to support justice-involved individuals in the city of Atlanta.

On September 6, 2018, Mayor Keisha Lance Bottoms issued an executive order to permanently stop accepting and housing ICE detainees in the Atlanta City Detention Center.
Background of the Initiative

The ACDC, located in the heart of Atlanta at Peachtree Street NW and Memorial Drive SW, is an 11-story, 471,000 square foot active detention and arrest-processing center, constructed in 1996 with capacity to detain approximately 1,300 people.

However, the average daily population of detainees was less than 50 as of May 2020 because of Mayor Bottoms’ and community-led successful efforts to:

1. Decriminalize several low-level offenses
2. Launch and expand a pre-arrest diversion initiative
3. Reform municipal cash bail
4. End a long-term contract with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement

Mayor Bottoms’ bold vision was to transform this underutilized facility into a Center for Equity: a multifaceted center for wellness and healing, skills-building, economic mobility and crime prevention, for people, families and communities impacted by the history of over-incarceration.
By converting this space, the City of Atlanta seeks to invest in people to break the cycle of poverty while at the same time improving public safety practices and opportunities that reduce recidivism and re-build lives.
Goals of the Initiative

Eliminate the need for the ACDC facility as an arrest-processing and detention center;

Establish a dynamic and vibrant Center for Equity, ideally through the transformation of the ACDC, that will advance racial and economic equity, promote restorative justice, and invest in the well-being of individuals, families, and communities;

Engage individuals, families and communities impacted by incarceration and ensure openness and transparency in the planning process;

Create a Center for Equity that is long term financially sustainable;

Ensure and improve safety and wellness across all of Atlanta’s neighborhoods.
Roles & Responsibilities

Mayor

Mayor Keisha Lance Bottoms sets the vision and goals of the initiative, provides direction, and makes decisions related to the future of the ACDC and the Center for Equity.

Initiative Sponsor

Rashad Taylor provides oversight and strategic advice on each phase of the initiative and works closely with our coalition and partners to advance policy solutions.
Strategic Lead

Sheryl Ude manages oversight and progress of a collaboration of leaders, partnerships, project work, budgets, and decisions ensuring alignment with the vision and timeline set forth. She executes strategic coordination of consensus building and driving results while maintaining accountability to a diverse set of perspectives, expectations, and levels of consciousness of all stakeholders impacted by the initiative.

Reimagining ACDC Program Manager

Maria Russo manages various workstreams of the initiative, ensuring effective communication with internal and external stakeholders and developing documents and presentations. Most importantly, this role maintains an overall bird’s eye view of the initiative, ensuring successful and timely completion of the necessary duties and envisioned goals.

Reimagining ACDC Planning Team

To support the effort, a passionate, diverse, and knowledgeable team of experts collaborated around a common mission – to drive the work to deliver three bold proposals (later developed into four) and engage the community in the City’s most transparent, grassroots-led initiative. This group formed the Planning Team of 24 members who met weekly since the signing of the Reimagining ACDC legislation through the sunset of the Task Force.

Once in awhile if we’re lucky in our careers we get to embrace a bold idea that is a game-changer not just in its outcome but in its process, too. From diving deep with Program Workgroup members into all the innovative programs already happening in Atlanta to hearing the personal stories of Task Force members to designing how the building could look with residents, Reimagining ACDC already is creating a more equitable Atlanta by centering every action in the voices of those residents most traumatized by historically discriminatory systems. Thank you, Mayor Bottoms, for showing us all that the journey matters just as much as the destination – and that by choosing to act more equitably today, each of us has the power to build a more equitable and resilient Atlanta.

Initiated Reimagining ACDC Phase I

Preliminary Feasibility Analysis and Conceptual Design: initial visioning, planning, and brainstorming
Today, while the value of diversity is almost unquestioned, too often we find that many of the most important policy decisions made by our leaders are not informed by true diversity. Too often, policy makers base their decisions on homogenous viewpoints which reflect a certain similarity of the life experiences of our leaders regardless of their differing racial or gender identities.

However, true diversity is not simply a matter of race, gender, or socioeconomic background. True diversity also comes from our differing individual life experiences. Mayor Bottoms ensured that the Reimagining ACDC Taskforce included a truly diverse group of leaders. Persons whose diversity in life experiences matched their diversity in age, race, gender identity, and background. It was this diversity that was truly the strength of the Taskforce.

~ Amber Robinson, Senior Assistant City Attorney, City of Atlanta
Task Force Responsibilities

- Actively participate throughout the duration of Phase I of the project, from the Kick-off meeting through the Final meeting;
- Attend all Task Force meetings, which will be held every 6-8 weeks, and should not exceed 4 or 5 meetings in total;
- Join a Working Group;
- May designate one person to attend meetings in their place in the event of their unavailability;
- Must be present for both the Kick-off and Final Task Force meetings;
- Are encouraged to participate in community engagement sessions related to the project, and may be asked to help coordinate, lead, or take an active role in certain instances;
- Support communication to the public and press about the work of the Task Force and its recommendations, directing any request for official comment to Mayor’s Office and Co-Chairs.

1. Task Force welcome & charge to the community announced

2. Background Briefing: Arrest and population trends at ACDC, Building information and site context

3. Small group facilitated discussions
   - Agenda
Launched first workgroup meetings and defined workgroup purposes

- Policy Workgroup Scope of Work - Reviewed city ordinances and state statutes carrying criminal penalties, with the objective of amendment or deletion, to depopulate and divert individuals from ACDC, consistent with public safety.

- Program Workgroup Scope of Work - Explored services and activities that could be housed in the building that would best advance well-being consistent with the vision for the Center for Equity.

- Building Workgroup Scope of Work - Analyzed the building capacity for adaptive reuse as a Center for Equity and envisioned design scenarios that could achieve that vision.
Task Force Meeting 2

September 10th, 2019
The Gathering Spot
The Northyards 384 / Northyards Blvd NW / Atlanta, GA 30313

Meeting Objectives:

- Updated Task Force on progress and unveiled interactive “Seat at the Table” and “menu cards” engagement activities
- Slides and Agenda

One of the most profound moments were the opportunities that included and allowed the Task Force to listen to people from the community. I believe in doing with versus doing to people when creating service models or plans. A key to the process was creating these moments to be inclusive of community and hear their experiences, pain, trauma and concerns regarding what the current facility has created for them and symbolizes. We have been gifted an opportunity to utilize these feelings and experiences. I hope we let them guide our decision making and transform the ACDC into something beautiful that can positively impact others going forward.

Standing inside the ACDC for the first time brought to life for me the magnitude of the work we were tasked to do. It became apparent to me that this initiative was about more than reimagining the use of a building. It was also about changing what the building represented. Isolation. Separation. In some cases, failure. This work was about creating a space that would bring us all together to provide a place of hope and opportunity. It was about creating community!

While the sixth and final Task Force meeting was canceled due to Mayor Bottoms’ Executive Order to postpone meetings of City Boards, Commissions and similar bodies to slow the spread of COVID-19, the Planning Team pushed forward and spent the next three months finalizing the final feasibility analysis and task force reports. While this shift presented challenges to this work, we saw this as an opportunity. The City’s response served as a model for how we prioritize our community’s health, safety, and wellness, which has proven more important than ever. Amid global health concerns, Reimagining ACDC represents a reality for more timely and localized models that advocate for and serve impacted communities.

It was inspiring that after one of the first few weeks of modeling a new ACDC a local shelter approached me about potentially having a teen dating violence prevention program hosted in the new site. What is on the horizon?

As we conclude Phase I (Preliminary Feasibility Assessment) of this initiative, we are very proud of the progress that has been made to date, and recognize that there is still much work to be done.

Phase II (Detailed Feasibility Analysis & Planning) will require additional expertise and involvement, in order to explore feasibility of the recommendations made by the Reimagining ACDC Task Force.

Mayor Bottoms remains committed to transforming public safety for the good of all Atlantans as evidenced by her following commitments:

1. Reprogramming resources from the City jail to expand community-based services
2. Expanding the Pre-Arrest Diversion Program citywide to reduce incarceration and increase equity and opportunities
3. Increasing funding for Citizens Review Board
4. Immediately standing up a Police Use of Force Advisory Council following Obama’s Call to Action
5. Engaging external justice reform expertise to analyze impact and develop a pathway to jail closure
Appendix: Workgroup Approaches to Recommendations

Market Analysis
The Emory Impact Team was tasked with evaluating a list of possible commercial uses that would complement the proposed Center for Equity.
